Felipe González Castro Descriptive Biography

Background

Dr. Felipe González Castro is a bilingual/bicultural Latino health psychologist. He is Professor and Southwest Borderlands Scholar at the College of Nursing and Health Innovation, Arizona State University. Dr. Castro received a Bachelor's Degree (BA) in Experimental Psychology from the University of California, Santa Barbara. In 1976 he earned his Master's degree in Social Work (M.S.W.) from the University of California, Los Angeles (UCLA) School of Social Welfare, and earned his doctoral degree in clinical psychology (Ph.D.) from the University of Washington, Seattle in 1981. As part of his pre-doctoral training, he completed a year-long internship at the UCLA Neuropsychiatric Institute with a focus on behavioral medicine. In 1981, he was appointed assistant professor in the clinical area of the UCLA Department of Psychology where he served from 1981 to 1988. From 1988 to 1991 he served as associate professor in the Division of Health Promotion in the Graduate School of Public Health, San Diego State University. In July of 1991, Dr. Castro moved to Arizona to join the clinical area of the Department of Psychology at Arizona State University. At that time, he was also appointed as Director of the Hispanic Research Center, where he served from 1991 to 1997. In 2011 he was appointed as Head of the Health Psychology area in the Department of Psychology at the University of Texas at El Paso. In 2015 he returned to Arizona State University with an appointment as Professor and Southwest Borderlands Scholar at the College of Nursing and Health Innovation.

Research

From 1989 to 1992, Dr. Castro served as the principal investigator of a study funded by the National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA) to examine client-treatment matches as related to treatment outcome among clients addicted to cocaine and/or methamphetamine. He also served as the program evaluator for San Diego County's, Project PARA, a drug intervention program to prevent HIV infection in opiate and other injection drug users. From 1991 to 1995, Dr. Castro served as the Principal Investigator of a community-based study to reduce cancer risks among Hispanic women in the Phoenix and San Diego areas. This four-year study titled, "Compañeros en la Salud" (Partners in Health), was funded by the National Cancer Institute (NCI), and utilized the Lay Health Advisor (Promotora) model to mobilize church systems for promoting healthy lifestyle changes to prevent breast, cervical, and diet-related cancers. From 1995 to 1997, Dr. Castro served as the principal investigator and coalition leader of the Hispanic Tobacco Education Coalition (HTEC) to promote tobacco education and prevention. This program was funded by the Arizona Department of Health Services (ADHS).

Dr. Castro has recently conducted the Corazón Life Journeys pilot study of resilience and acculturative change among drug-dependent males in treatment. This study utilized the Integrative Mixed Methods methodology, which was also utilized in the companion study of resilience among Hispanic leaders and community residents. This Hispanic Leaders study was funded by the Institute for Mental Health Research. From 2005 to 2010, was a member of the Resilience Group in the ASU Department of Psychology, Dr. Castro served as a Co-Investigator in the study titled, "Resilience and Health in Communities and Individuals," which was funded by the National Institute on Aging. Also, as a faculty affiliate of the Southwest Interdisciplinary Research Center (SIRC) he also served as the Principal Investigator of a randomized controlled trial of a parent education intervention, Familias: Preparando la Nueva Generación, which was funded by the National Institute for Minority Health and Health Disparities (NIMHD). This parent training intervention promoted parental skills for helping their children to utilize resistance skills that were learned from the keepin' it REAL youth prevention intervention to avoid alcohol, tobacco and illegal drugs. Dr. Castro currently serves as the Principal Investigator of a two-year study sponsored by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. This Integrative Mixed Methods study examines local adaptations and intervention sustainability among rural middle schools located in Pennsylvania and Ohio, schools that have used the keepin' it REAL youth drug prevention program.

Mentorship

Dr. Castro has served as a mentor to several scholars at various academic levels of professional development: undergraduate, graduate, post-doctoral, and early career faculty. Through his Mixed Methods Research Lab, he has also provided mentorship and preparation for graduate school to dozens of undergraduate students. In 2005 he received the award for Excellence in Mentorship from the National Hispanic Science Network. And in 2005 to 2006 he served as a mentor under a long-distance mentorship program sponsored by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, titled, "Developing Leadership in Reducing Substance Abuse." He has served as a Co-Director of the Interdisciplinary Research Training Institute (IRTI) from 2010 to the present, and also serves as a Co-Director of the NHSN Research Mentorship Program for Early Career Faculty.
